Course Objectives:

- Describe postmenopausal estrogen production and role in breast cancer tumorigenesis
- Understand the difference between germline and somatic mutations
- Be able to describe the possible role of the HSD3B1 mutation in postmenopausal ER+ breast cancer

The University of Washington School of Medicine is accredited by the Accreditation Council for Continuing Medical Education to provide continuing medical education for physicians.

The University of Washington School of Medicine designates this live activity for a maximum of 20.0 AMA Category 1 Credits™. Physicians should claim only the credit commensurate with the extent of their participation in the activity. (Each session is 1.0 credits).

Speaker Disclosure: Dr. Flanagan has no financial relationship to disclose.
Planning Committee Disclosure: Drs. Wood, Marquardt, and Horvath has no financial relationship to disclose.
Department of Surgery Grand Rounds Contact: dosadmin@uw.edu